The Story and Background behind "Sabrina's Law"

On the morning of September 29, 2003, Sara Shannon handed her daughter Sabrina five dollars for lunch, gave her a quick kiss and watched her walk into the bustling halls of Bishop Smith High School in Pembroke, Ontario. Four hours later she was standing in the emergency room of the Pembroke General Hospital watching helplessly as doctors and nurses struggled to save their daughter's life.

Only 13 years old, Sabrina Shannon died a day later of complications brought about by anaphylactic shock. Suspected cause of death: eating french fries served in the school cafeteria. French fries that she had eaten before, only this time the cafeteria was also serving poutine. All it would take is for the same tongs to be used in both dishes to set off Sabrina's anaphylactic reaction to dairy.

Sabrina's Law follows the Shannon's journey as they struggle to deal with their daughter's death and embark on a heroic crusade for social change. In 2006, their efforts resulted in the creation of Sabrina's Law in the Province of Ontario. It is the first legislation in the world to protect children with deadly allergies. Today, their efforts continue to make Sabrina's Law a reality all over the world.

The Elementary Teachers' Federation of Ontario Individual Plans (IPs)

Principals are required to develop individual plans (IPs) for students with anaphylactic allergies. The IP must inform employees in direct contact with the student of the type of allergy, monitoring, avoidance strategies, and appropriate treatment.
