Surviving Due Process: Stephen Jeffers v. School Board

3000 in production

"The film enables viewers to learn about rules and mistakes people make in the process. Designed for training programs, it may also be of interest to families involved in pursuing their children's educational rights." Quest, national magazine for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, January 2005

"The folks that brought us resources on No Child Left Behind and those wonderful books explaining Special Education Law, have done it again. Anyone facing or considering a due process hearing should watch this DVD." Support For Families Newsletter, San Francisco, CA, Winter 2004

"I would recommend this DVD to anyone who desires to know more about Due Process proceedings." Jackie D. Igafo-Te'o, Bridges 4 Kids Website

"The DVD provides a much needed look into a process that is multi-layered and usually fraught with emotions." Melinda Kopp, parent

"Walking on the treadmill, I increased my time from 30 to 60 minutes—I couldn't bear to turn it off!" Anne, Special Ed Advocate newsletter subscriber

"We enjoy creating educational media, documentaries and training materials on issues that need more public awareness. We devote ourselves to topics about the legal and educational issues surrounding people who have disabilities."

"Working on the 'Due Process' project was so much fun! It is exactly the type of project V.A.V.S. wants to do: it brings together people who are heartily involved in the subject, it brings to light aspects of a procedure many parents must go through and it has a very real and human feel to it. Every viewer will have fun and learn something new from watching this video." John Nelson, President, V.A.V.S.

Surviving Due Process Wins Award of Excellence from Aegis Awards. Surviving Due Process was directed and filmed by V.A.V.S. Video Productions, a team of specialists in producing educational video programs. (January 9, 2005)
